

"DEARLY LOVES" THE CHILD SHE HIT WITH WHIP

Mrs. Frederick W. Evers of No. 34 East One Hundred and Ninetieth street, who says that she "dearly loves" twelve-year-old Alice Randolph, must explain to-morrow to Magistrate Butts, in the Morrisania Court, why the child has forty-eight contusions on her body and legs, all said to be the marks of a whipping given her by Mrs. Evers ten days ago.

Mrs. Evers is free to-day on $1,000 bail. When the case was called yesterday at the instance of the Rev. DeWitt L. Pelton, rector of St. James's Episcopal Church, Magistrate Butts first fixed bail at $200, but was so shocked at a discovery of the child's bodily condition that he raised the bail to $500 and then to $1,000.

The little girl spent to-day in the rooms of the Children's Society. She says that her name used to be Viola Price and that Mrs. Evers's name also was Price. Mrs. Evers, she says, used to tell her she was her mother until five years ago, when she married Mr. Evers. Then, the child says, Mrs. Evers told her that she, Mrs. Evers, was a second cousin of Alice's mother. The little girl told the court that while she and Mrs. Evers lived at the St. George Hotel, Brooklyn, she always had a governess, a Miss Adelaide Hart.

Mrs. Evers was arrested on Wednesday evening after Dr. Pelton had put the case before agents of the Children's Society. The child has lived near his cord and said it was the weapon used in beating the child.

The agents' affidavits were accompanied by a certificate signed by Dr. W. Travis Gillis, physician of the society, who said that Alice had ten bruises on the back, seven on one arm and thirteen on the other. The real of the forty-eight marks were on her legs.

Mr. and Mrs. Evers were very indignant to-day at the charges and called the child a "romancer."

Mr. Evers said that Alice's story of having lived with Mrs. Evers and Miss Hart at the St. George Hotel was true and that Mrs. Evers was her mother. He second cousin. He denied Mrs. Evers ever had said that she was Alice's mother.
